Virginia Convention for the Abolition of Slavery.

The ocean work goes rapidly on. The Virginia Legislature, in defiance of Alexander, yesterday passed a bill calling a convention to abolish slavery. This is a great movement for the abolition of slavery. The rebellion, exempted by that great power, makes every thing coming to the march of freedom which is ought to be. The call might cause constant congress rigid.

The president has declared the truth that the constitution prohibits the Legislature from the abolition of slavery, but not slavery, and that the erection of West Virginia into a State was a violation of the letter of the Supreme and Circuit Courts. Slavery is abolished in the loyal portion of the county. The General Assembly, composed of members elected on the 3d day of January, 1864, on election of delegates shall be held on the second Thursday in November, on the 11th day of February following. The delegates shall be apportioned among the several counties and districts as the General Assembly at its session next after the return of the enumeration of the inhabitants, and within the limits of the State of Virginia.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law, or to make any ordinance whereby any person may be hindered or delayed in the collection of bona fide debts heretofore contracted, or any right of property, or to affect the title to property, or to free any person from his or her obligation to service or labor, or to indemnify any person who has heretofore voluntarily borne arms against the United States, or who has given aid or comfort to the rebellion, or to pass any law impairing the validity of debts created, or to be created, or to affect the validity of any sale, mortgage, or other lien given, bona fide, for the purpose of paying such debts.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law abolishing the relation of husband and wife among persons now held as slaves.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law recognizing the right of property in man.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law granting compensation to any person for the loss of slaves.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law to indemnify any person who has been engaged in the military or naval service against the United States, or any person who has given aid or comfort to the rebellion, for the loss of slaves.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law to prevent the emancipation of slaves by their owners.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law to prevent the inhabitants of any portion of the State from assembling freely together for the purpose of petitioning the Legislature for the abolition of slavery.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law to prevent any person from becoming a citizen of the State, and enjoying all the rights of citizenship, on account of his former condition as a slave.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law to prevent any person from settling in the State, or to remove therefrom, with his property.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law to prevent any person from acquiring property in the State.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law to prevent any person from enjoying the right of worshiping God according to the dictates of his own conscience.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law to prevent any person from assembling with any religious congregation, or any congregation of Christians, in the State, at such place of worship as may be agreed upon by the congregation.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law to prevent any person from preaching the gospel to any congregation.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law to prevent any person from instructing his or her children, or any other person's children, in the elementary branches of learning.

The Legislature shall have no power to pass any law to prevent any person from teaching any slave to read the word of God.

SENDING ON THEIR RIGHT.

We note, with pleasure, the fact that Mr. Chase, Secretary of the Treasury, has sent to Governor Morton, of Indiana, the sum of $1,000,000 to pay the soldiers from that State who will shortly be furloughed to visit their homes. The Secretary deserves the thanks of the whole country for this act of justice. It is the right thing in the right place, and it never came more opportunely, nor was it ever more timely than now.

The soldiers of Indiana have done their duty. For three years they have fought gallantly for the Union. They have been in the front rank of battle, and when the fortunes of war have compelled them to retire, they have done so in order. They have been in the front rank of battle, and when the fortunes of war have compelled them to retire, they have done so in order. They have been in the front rank of battle, and when the fortunes of war have compelled them to retire, they have done so in order.

Their gallant conduct, their unflinching courage, their devotion to the cause of the country, have been the theme of admiration wherever they have been known
